A NOTE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Nihad Awad

Founder and National Executive Director of CAIR

We live in a moment in history that is both full of fear and of courage. On one hand, anti-Muslim bigotry, Islamophobia, and violence against Muslims have never been more normalized in American politics and media. On the other, we have seen the historic rise of American Muslim political success, such as in the election of Representatives Ilhan Omar and Rashida Tlaib, the country's first two American Muslim congresswomen. Although we should be alarmed at the rise of anti-Muslim racism, we should also be emboldened by the way the mainstream is fighting to put an end to Islamophobia.

For 25 years, CAIR has monitored, documented, and fought against discrimination, acts of bias, and hate crimes against American Muslims. In recent years, through a series of reports, we have researched and analyzed the financial and political power of the Islamophobia Network, an influential group of institutions, donors, and individuals who are primarily responsible for polluting the American public with its hate-filled agenda. In this report, Hijacked by Hate: American Philanthropy and the Islamophobia Network, we take an even deeper look at the funding sources and societal impact of anti-Muslim special interest groups. Unfortunately, our research has found that traditional American charities, foundations, and philanthropic institutions are being used to anonymize and funnel money from powerful donors to the Islamophobia Network.

With this report, researchers and advocates can add a powerful set of tools to their ongoing struggles against racism and bigotry. On behalf of the CAIR family, I would like to thank the researchers, writers, editors, and designers that made this report possible. The most important expression of gratitude, however, must be reserved for the everyday social justice fighters and community workers who secure our future through their tireless efforts to stand for truth, equality, and dignity. To them, we offer this report as an act of solidarity and promise.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Anti-Muslim bigotry is a common and widespread feature of our country’s mainstream cultural and political landscape. However, it is important to remember that Islamophobic attitudes and policies are propagated by special interest groups with deep sources of funding. This decentralized group of actors is known as the Islamophobia Network, a close-knit family of organizations and individuals that share an ideology of extreme anti-Muslim animus, and work with one another to negatively influence public opinion and government policy about Muslims and Islam.

To provide a better understanding of how the Islamophobia Network operates, this report maps the flow of funding from charitable organizations to anti-Muslim special interest groups, and their negative impact on public life.

The report finds that the Islamophobia Network has been drawing upon mainstream American philanthropic institutions for financial and political support for years.

CAIR researchers have found 1,096 organizations responsible for funding 39 groups in the Islamophobia Network between 2014 and 2016. The report also reveals the total revenue capacity of the Islamophobia Network during this period to have reached at least $1.5 billion.

As this report demonstrates, many of these anti-Muslim groups, usually considered marginal or fringe, are in fact funded by mainstream American charitable organizations such as Fidelity Charitable Fund, the National Christian Charitable Foundation, and the Jewish Communal Fund.

While some funds and foundations are ideologically aligned with the interests of the Islamophobia Network, most mainstream foundations are more than likely being exploited or used by donors who seek to anonymize their contributions to anti-Muslim special interest groups. This report allows stakeholders to determine whether they are directly or indirectly connected to the Islamophobia Network. By mapping the flow of funding from charitable organizations to anti-Muslim advocacy groups, and their negative impact on public life, this report asks, “Should the American philanthropic community divest from the Islamophobia industry?”

Islamophobia is unfortunately a spreading contagion. CAIR's report on this network and its substantial funding sources is a must read for those committed to human rights for all and an end to the demonization of the Muslim community.

It should serve as a wake up call to those foundations and donor advised funds that have helped funnel resources to individuals and organizations that are behind the rising tide of hatred against the Muslim community worldwide and here at home in the United States.

Action and practice-driven research tackling Islamophobia is the most effective avenue toward solutions. CAIR's legal and community leadership confronting Islamophobia rising from the state and unleashed by hate mongers, enforced within prisons and extended into mosques, drives the trenchant analysis within this study.

This report, very simply, is critical examination for any individual or organization committed to the enterprise of combatting Islamophobia.

Islamophobia is reaching epidemic proportions in America, and the Islamophobia Network is one of the main culprits behind this alarming trend. Our efforts to resist and counter this network cannot succeed apart from a better understanding of its tactics, its funding, and its impact. CAIR's report Hijacked by Hate sheds light on how the philanthropic funding of this network enables its operatives to fuel hostility and hatred toward American Muslims.

It is essential reading for stakeholders committed to the dismantling of anti-Muslim racism in America.

METHODOLOGY

The empirical data on the Islamophobia Network's financial information was acquired through a thorough review of thousands of pages of publicly available tax filings, in addition to searchable databases, namely GuideStar and Foundation Directory Online.

First, the tax filings for each anti-Muslim organization identified in CAIR's 2016 Islamophobia Report, Confronting Fear, were acquired through Guidestar. The tax Form 990 is publicly available online approximately two years after filing. Therefore, in 2018, the most recently available forms would be those dated for 2016. Additionally, the Form 990 only contains information about who the organization gives money to. It does not show who the organization receives money from. Thus, each organization was subsequently searched on the Foundation Directory Online database to determine the funding channels to the organization. This revealed an entirely new set of organizations who appeared to be funding anti-Muslim hate groups. Each of these newly discovered funding organizations was then searched on both GuideStar's directory – to acquire the tax filings – and in the Foundation Directory Online to continue to track links among funding channels and hate groups. To ensure the accuracy of the compiled database generated through this process, five months after the initial collection process each data point was reassessed and modified if necessary. This was done by searching each of the 39 anti-Muslim hate groups in the FDO, and cross-checking each group's funders, and the unique amount each funder gave in 2014, 2015, and 2016. If the amount of money listed in the FDO was lower than what existed in CAIR's database, the value was cross-checked with the funder's tax returns, and the discrepancy was resolved. Any newfound funder was added to CAIR's database, and in turn searched on FDO to find any other groups they may have funded. This cyclical system ensured tighter verification. If a discrepancy arose between entries in the FDO and data in the Form 990, the latter was used because it was the primary source material. Through this exhaustive manner, the research revealed an enormous web of anti-Muslim organizations connected to a wealth of funding sources, both fringe and mainstream.

INTRODUCTION

It was a simple declaration, as ignorant and dangerous as it was ominous:

“I think Islam hates us... it’s radical but it’s very hard to define. It’s very hard to separate because you don’t know who is who.” ¹

With these few short words to CNN’s Anderson Cooper on prime-time cable news, then-presidential candidate Donald Trump exemplified just how normal Islamophobia has become in mainstream American political and cultural discourse

By suggesting that Islam and Muslims constitute an existential threat to American society, Trump provided a ‘permission slip’ for scores of individuals and institutions to target American Muslim families, houses of worship, and institutions with unfettered rage. Since 2016, FBI statistics support studies by CAIR, the ACLU, and a range of other research and advocacy institutions that anti-Muslim violence and Islamophobic attitudes are dramatically rising across the country.²

One need not dig too deep into recent memory to recall horrific stories of attacks against average American Muslims. In 2017, two Portland men were fatally stabbed defending two teenage girls from a self-described white-nationalist. In 2019, a woman was violently assaulted in an emergency room; a child in Minnesota took his own life after months of being physically attacked at school simply for his faith. In addition to the hundreds of stories we know about, there are hundreds more that are undoubtedly unheard and unreported every year. Many of these incidents are a direct consequence of the hostile climate created by the discriminatory Muslim Ban, the unconstitutional anti-Shariah legislation movement, and the other forms of institutionalized racism aimed at Muslims and the faith of Islam.

Anti-Muslim animus and Islamophobic messages are now pervasive features of our country's mainstream political, legal, educational, and media landscapes because these ideas are perpetuated by organizations and institutions with deep and extensive sources of funding and deliberate political agendas.

Collectively, CAIR has produced a series of reports since 2011 that has exposed the nature of the Islamophobia Network. It has detailed and analyzed the institutions, personalities, and funding channels that are responsible for spreading fear and lies about Muslims, Islam, and their place in American society.³

This 2019 Islamophobia report, Hijacked by Hate, is the successor of those documents and provides the greatest insight thus far into the way in which anti-Muslim institutions have pervaded American mainstream institutions. It should come as no surprise to readers to find prominent sensationalist and conspiratorial actors, such as Brigitte Gabriel of ACT for America or Daniel Pipes of the Middle East Forum, among the loudest voices of the Islamophobia Network now operating in the American public sphere with impunity. This study reports the unsettling finding that the Islamophobia Network has been drawing upon reputable American philanthropic institutions for financial and political support for years, often unbeknownst to donors, civil society organizations, and the general public. This report will demonstrate that many of these anti-Muslim groups, which would typically be considered marginal or fringe, are in fact funded by mainstream American charitable organizations such as Fidelity Charitable Fund, the National Christian Charitable Fund, and the Jewish Communal Fund.

These findings then beg the question: “Should mainstream American philanthropists fund organizations that promote fear, hate, and conspiracy theories about Muslims and Islam?” Furthermore, if donors and recipients knew they were contributing to, and drawing from, the same pool of resources that fuel anti-social Islamophobic institutions, would they remain silent?

To provide a clear understanding of the way the Islamophobia Network operates, and to illustrate its danger to the fabric of our democratic principles, this report organizes its findings into three interrelated sections:

1. Funding Sources (funders)
2. Anti-Muslim Organizations (funded)
3. Impact on Society

This structure allows readers to identify actors in the Network according to their particular role and their influence on public discourse. Simply, groups that fund anti-Muslim racism and groups that are funded to then perpetuate and promote anti-Muslim racism. Admittedly, there is a slight overlap between these categories. For example, some foundations exist solely for the purpose of funding Islamophobic activities, so they may be considered both funders and perpetrators. It is most often the case, however, that funding sources of anti-Muslim bigotry are also deeply invested in providing assistance to a range of mainstream American community service organizations. The distinction between funder and funded illustrates the path from the revenue source to the societal impact.

Despite the overwhelming flow of funding that supports the Islamophobia Network and its deep embeddedness in American philanthropic, cultural, and political institutions, there are promising signs that the tide of anti-Muslim bigotry may actually be receding. Foremost is the public outrage expressed by a wide swathe of the American public against the Muslim Ban after it was signed as an executive order on January 27, 2017. For weeks, tens of thousands of average Americans, along with seasoned activists, civil society leaders, and public dignitaries, gathered at airports across the country to help protect travelers that might be affected by the discriminatory act. This act of collective resistance signaled that anti-Muslim networks could no longer act with impunity. Many American were no longer willing to overlook overt discrimination against American Muslims. Even as portions of the Muslim Ban were ultimately considered legal by the Supreme Court in the summer of 2018, awareness about the depth and breadth of Islamophobia's impact on society has become an important component of interfaith solidarity, democratic organizing, and community activism against the Trump administration's countless attacks against civil and human rights.⁴

Those defending civil rights in the courts were accompanied by others operating in cultural and political spaces. During the height of the Trump campaign's radically anti-Muslim rhetoric, the American public lauded Ibtihaj Muhammad, the Olympic fencer who won a bronze medal in the 2016 summer games, proudly wearing her headscarf. Time Magazine named her among their 100 most influential people list, Barbie created a doll in her likeness, and, as a testament to changing times, Hillary Clinton, who had returned campaign money donated on behalf of the Muslim community during her 2000 senatorial bid, publicly praised the first American-Muslim female Olympic medalist.⁵ After the 2016 election, many American cultural institutions affirmed American Muslim identity as an expression of solidarity and resistance against the Trump administration. High profile events such as New York Fashion Week began to center Muslim women's fashion and even Roseanne Barr, a racist and anti-Muslim bigot in her own right, attempted to address the plague of Islamophobia on her short-lived revival on prime-time television.⁶

Perhaps most tellingly, the traditional political landscape has shifted significantly to embrace American Muslims. The Democratic Party featured Khizr Khan, a Gold Star father, as a keynote speaker during its 2016 convention.⁷ Since that time, two American-Muslim women, Rashida Tlaib of Michigan and Ilhan Omar of Minnesota, have been elected to Congress, Representative Andre Carson of Indiana enjoyed an easy reelection to his House seat, and former Representative Keith Ellison became the country's first Muslim Attorney General.

In fact, as a joint CAIR, MPower Change, and Jetpac report discovered,

131 out of the 276 Muslims that ran for public office between 2016 and 2018 were elected or appointed. Collectively, American Muslim candidates were able to raise over $16 million for their campaigns.⁸ This rapid and enthusiastic rise in American Muslim political activism is a poetic response to Trump's Muslim Ban: he did not want Muslims coming to the United States – they entered the halls of Congress and state legislatures across the country. New political research has also shown that anti-Muslim bigotry can be a liability for candidates – the majority of those that run on such platforms may suffer at the polls.⁹

In addition to the noticeable positive changes in the cultural and political landscape — even in the midst of the mainstreaming of anti-Muslim bigotry in the White House — another promising sign that the Islamophobia Network industry is facing popular backlash is the flourishing range of research and advocacy being done to combat its insidious impact on society. For example, the Carter Center brought the discussion of anti-Muslim discrimination to the forefront of policy-maker concerns through a year-long study. From 2017 to 2018, Dr. Houda Abadi surveyed experts and practitioners on best practices and strategies to tackle the global phenomenon of Islamophobia.¹⁰ The University of California, Berkeley and Georgetown University now have fully established Islamophobia studies centers, headed by Dr. Hatem Bazian and Dr. John Esposito respectively, dedicated to bringing together thought leaders, scholars, and practitioners to develop applied and comparative research agendas on the pervasive and fluid nature of the problem.¹¹ University of Arkansas professor Khaled Beydoun's book, American Islamophobia, made significant headlines as greater audiences needed access to the historical context and racial dynamics of the once fringe but now mainstream anti-Muslim discourse dominating the public sphere.¹²

A striking series of studies have now peeled back the layers of institutional funding and political patronage that support Islamophobic rhetoric in the public sphere.

The most troubling, perhaps, of these reports were the revelations that the San Francisco Jewish Federation, the Los Angeles Jewish Community Foundation, and New York's Jewish Communal Fund all support far-right, xenophobic networks that, in part or wholly, vilify Muslims and perpetuate Islamophobia in the public arena.^{13,14} Likewise, in 2018, the local chapter of CAIR in Minnesota (CAIR-MN) and ISAIAH-MN, an interfaith advocacy group, released a troubling report demonstrating a direct linkage between anti-Muslim rhetoric in local political and media contexts and the executive boards of powerful corporations such as Comcast and General Mills.¹⁵

The Action Center on Race and the Economy (ACRE) also documented the various corporate interests that systematically fund politicians who espouse anti-Muslim views as part of their profit-driven logic.¹⁶

These studies are all part of a growing movement among journalists, scholars, and non-profit practitioners that aims to map out funding channels and political relationships of the ever-expanding Islamophobia Network.¹⁷

Hijacked by Hate adds to this growing momentum to dismantle the Islamophobia Network's impact on society by providing a comprehensive outline of the relationship between mainstream philanthropic and charitable institutions and the main actors responsible for fueling anti-Muslim bigotry in the political and cultural landscape.

This report outlines the funding channels and political connections of the Islamophobia Network in order to:

2 Provide readers with background on the political ambitions and profit-oriented interests of the Islamophobia Network as well as their impact on society.

1 Expose the network's embeddedness within mainstream American philanthropic institutions whose missions are antithetical to xenophobia and social polarization.

3 Provide advocates information that can be used to strategize, organize, and advocate more effectively to counter anti-Muslim and Islamophobic misinformation campaigns.

The information and analysis provided in this report, coupled with the growing movement across the country to combat racism and xenophobia in all forms, will help fundamentally alter and impair the landscape of Islamophobia funding.

What is Islamophobia?

In a climate of rising anti-Muslim hate, there is a pressing need for a robust definition of the term Islamophobia. As a civil rights organization, CAIR seeks to define Islamophobia in a way that also facilitates advocacy to counter the hate and prejudice.

In short, Islamophobia is anti-Muslim racism.

At length, Islamophobia is a fear, hatred, or prejudice toward Islam and Muslims that results in a pattern of discrimination and oppression. Islamophobia creates a distorted understanding of Islam and Muslims by transforming the global and historical faith tradition of Islam, along with the rich history of cultural and ethnic diversity of its adherents, into a set of stereotyped characteristics most often reducible to themes of violence, civilizational subversion, and fundamental otherness. Islamophobia must also be understood as a system of both religious and racial animosity that is perpetuated by private citizens as well as cultural and political structures.¹⁸

Contemporary Islamophobia is shaped and reinforced through popular culture and news media and is often legitimized by state policies. As such, anti-Muslim racism occurs at both individual and institutional levels, and can take many forms. At private and local levels, Islamophobia may manifest as physical attacks or harassment against those perceived to be Muslim, or through damage to mosques and Islamic centers. Anti-Muslim racism on the part of government structures often emerges in the creation and enforcement of anti-Muslim laws and policies that directly or indirectly lead to the curtailment of Muslim civil rights and civil liberties. This includes, for example, the unconstitutional Muslim Ban, anti-Shariah legislation, surveillance practices, and a host of other national and foreign policy measures. While there is an ongoing debate between academics and practitioners over a final definition of Islamophobia as a term, it should be noted that in 2018, the All Party Parliamentary Group (AAPG) in the UK officially adopted a definition of the term grounded in the concept of structural racism discussed here, signaling the importance of tackling the subject at the highest levels of government.¹⁹ They defined it as, “a type of racism that targets expressions of Muslimness or perceived Muslimness.”²⁰

Identifying Islamophobia

An organization or individual is considered a part of the Islamophobia Network if it does any of the following or if it funds, partners with, or presents individuals or groups that:

Allege that Islam and Muslims are inherently or uniquely violent, misogynistic, inferior, intolerant, primitive, static, authoritarian, homophobic, manipulative, self-righteous, devious, or that Islam is the antithesis of civilization.

EXAMPLES

Speaking about “brutal Islamic terrorism” in his presidential nomination acceptance speech, Trump said “I will do everything in my power to protect our LGBTQ citizens from the violence and oppression of a hateful foreign ideology.”²¹

THIS PAGE:
The 45th at the Conservative Political Action Conference in 2015. (Michael Vadon/ Flickr).

Allege that Islam is an existential threat to the U.S. and/or the “West” and that Muslims, or their representative institutions, are part of a plot to overthrow the “West” or America.

Trump stated, “Islam hates us.”²²

Support unequal treatment under the law for Islam or Muslims.

EXAMPLES

Ayaan Hirsi Ali suggested that the U.S. Constitution *be amended to allow for discrimination against Muslims.*²³

Guy Rodgers of act for America said, “Muslims should be treated differently because their legal system is inherently flawed.”²⁴

Allege that violent groups which falsely and perversely claim a religious cover possess the correct understanding of Islam.

The National Security Strategy released in December 2017 states, “Jihadist terrorists such as ISIS and al-Qa’ida continue to spread a barbaric ideology...These jihadist terrorists attempt to force those under their influence to submit to Sharia law.”²⁵

ANTI-MUSLIM BIAS INCIDENTS

Snapshot: Anti-Muslim Bias Incidents in Today's America

Bullying

In Minnesota, 15 year-old high school freshman Jacob Letourneau-Elsharkawy took his life after suffering repeated incidents of extreme bullying. His mother, Faith Elsharkawy, said, “When [Jacob] was in a room, he brightened it up with his contagious smile, his laughter, and wonderful energetic personality.” She later added, “He was a classic comedian. He could make you have belly-roaring laughs that brightened your day. He had a big heart and would stand beside you through thick and thin.” ²⁶

Jacob began being targeted in 8th grade when his mother started to wear a headscarf. He didn’t hide his religion, defending the Muslim faith against offensive statements and answering questions from his friends about his beliefs.²⁷ He then reported being called “terrorist” and other derogatory terms, in addition to repeated aggravated acts of physical assault. In one incident, he was physically forced into a locker, which resulted in him getting a concussion. In another, he suffered a broken collarbone and a concussion when he was shoved violently into a metal door frame. On Nov. 9, 2017, Letourneau-Elsharkawy was taken to the hospital after he was assaulted again on a school bus, suffering yet another concussion and more than 100 contusions. ²⁸

After school administrators failed to effectively address months of verbal and physical abuse, Jacob took his own life on April 29, 2018.

Attacking Mosques

Flames engulfed the Victoria Islamic Center in Texas in the early morning hours of January 28, 2017. The arson completely gutted the mosque, leaving behind an empty shell of a building.

Marq Perez, 26, was convicted of hate crime and felony arson and sentenced to 24 years in prison for his attack. A person who was with Perez on the night of the fire said he was excited and “jumping up and down like a little kid” while watching the mosque burn. He also snapped “trophy photos” on his cellphone of the flames.²⁹

The community was left scared and devastated. Despite an overwhelming show of support to rebuild the mosque, a sense of wariness and fear has lingered. Where once worshipers used to pray with the door open, they must now use a code to enter the mosque.³⁰

Travel/Immigration

Dr. Eblal Zakzok, an American citizen living in Columbus, Ohio, was a full-time professor in Syria until 2014, when Syrian regime security forces detained, beat, and tortured him for two weeks. Dr. Zakzok and his family fled to Turkey to escape the horrific civil war and continued persecution and torture. In December 2014, while his wife and children remained in Turkey, Dr. Zakzok came to the U.S. and requested asylum. He was granted asylum and obtained a fellowship at Ohio State University where he now teaches Surveying, Remote Sensing and Geographical Information Systems.

Following his successful asylum application, Dr. Zakzok’s wife and three of his children were granted asylee benefits in 2016. Shortly thereafter, they traveled to the U.S. to reunite with him. His daughter Turkie was forced to remain in Turkey because she was over 21 at the time he was granted asylum, and therefore did not qualify for his asylum benefits. On August 25, 2017, Dr. Zakzok filed a petition seeking approval for Turkie, to immigrate to the U.S.

On September 24, 2017, Trump issued Muslim Ban 3.0 which bars all Syrians from entering the U.S. The Ban bars Turkie from obtaining the immigrant visa she has applied for and prevents her from being reunited with her father, mother, and other siblings. Turkie cannot obtain permanent legal residence in Turkey, and is therefore at risk of being returned to Syria, where she could face torture and/or death.

As a result of the June 2018 Supreme Court ruling to uphold the Muslim Ban, Turkie has been banned indefinitely from joining her family.

ANTI-MUSLIM MAINSTREAM:

American Philanthropy and the Islamophobia Network

It may come as no surprise to readers that well-known anti-Muslim groups, such as ACT for America or the Middle East Forum, despite once being considered fringe voices in the public sphere, have enjoyed rapid growth in funding and influence in the current political moment. What is less known and more shocking is that the Islamophobia Network is strongly supported by mainstream American philanthropic institutions.

As readers will learn in the following pages, data compiled and analyzed by CAIR researchers demonstrates that despite the well-known racist and xenophobic attitudes of Islamophobic organizations, reputable philanthropic institutions have funneled hundreds of millions of dollars into the activities of the Islamophobia Network. These include household names such as Fidelity and Schwab, as well as community-centered, faith-based charities such as the Jewish Communal Fund and the National Christian Charitable Foundation. They also include lesser known and more opaque private family foundations such as the Mirowski Family Foundation Inc., which has virtually no public imprint but nonetheless contributes millions of dollars to support anti-Muslim activity. Together, the expansive funding network revealed in this report demonstrates that the Islamophobia Network cannot be considered a marginal or passing phenomenon in American society. Rather, it is a prominent and shameful institutional feature of American philanthropy.

The word ‘philanthropy’ means the practice of donating large and sustainable amounts of funding to promote the welfare of society. It comes from the Greek roots of philo- (love of) and anthropo- (human). As a nearly universal tradition of charitable giving, philanthropy can be understood as fundamentally rooted in a love for humanity. In the American tradition, the practice of philanthropy was established by groups such as the Puritans and Quakers and built upon by towering figures of American history such as Benjamin Franklin. Wealthy businessmen and industrialists such as George Peabody, Andrew Carnegie, and Julius Rosenwald (Sears) donated today’s equivalent of hundreds of millions of dollars of their wealth to support institutions that continue to benefit society today.

Unfortunately, in the current political moment, this rich tradition of American voluntary charity and social service is threatened by the way the Islamophobia Network has embedded itself in mainstream philanthropic institutions.

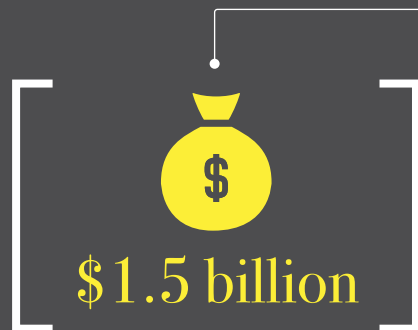

Readers of this report will be as dismayed as its authors to learn that the same organizations that fund fundamental American institutions such as the Boy Scouts, American Red Cross, and the Salvation Army are also responsible for providing funding to anti-Muslim, Islamophobic groups.

According to CAIR's research, a staggering 1,096 charitable institutions financed at least 39 Islamophobia Network groups between 2014 and 2016. These foundations donated various amounts and did so across a wide range: from the minuscule amount of $20 to the staggering sum of $32.4 million. The complete list of the 1,096 organizations that contribute to the funding of the Islamophobia Network are provided in Appendix I.

In the following pages, we provide profiles of 18 organizations that donated over $1 million to the network between 2014 and 2016, showing the ways in which their funding patterns consistently support mainstream charitable causes, as well as xenophobic agendas furthered by the Islamophobia Network.

The organizations are divided into three categories:

1. Donor Advised Funds
2. Faith-Based Donor Advised Funds
3. Family Foundations

We also provide a list of the names of 80 organizations that donated between $100,000 to $999,999 over the same period of time.

The great work done by the Foundation, however, is undermined by its continued support for xenophobic, anti-Muslim organizations:

CCF has given money to:
American Freedom Alliance (AFA)

It publicly hands out awards known Islamophobes such as David Horowitz, director of the David Horowitz Freedom Center.

CCF has given money to:
ACLU American Center for Law and Justice

A law firm that supports anti-Muslim policies and legislation and publishes anti-Muslim propaganda.

Some of its recipients include the award-winning faith-based program Homeboy Industries, which provides economic and leadership opportunities for at-risk youth and formerly incarcerated individuals on their path to reintegrating into society. CCF also provides critical support to advocacy networks responsible for tackling issues like homelessness, civic engagement, and immigrant rights, most notably those vulnerable to changes to DACA legislation.

AFA, a recipient of CCF funds, has given awards to:

Dutch politician Geert Wilders

His views have been identified as a threat to public safety and he has been blocked by multiple European governments from entry.

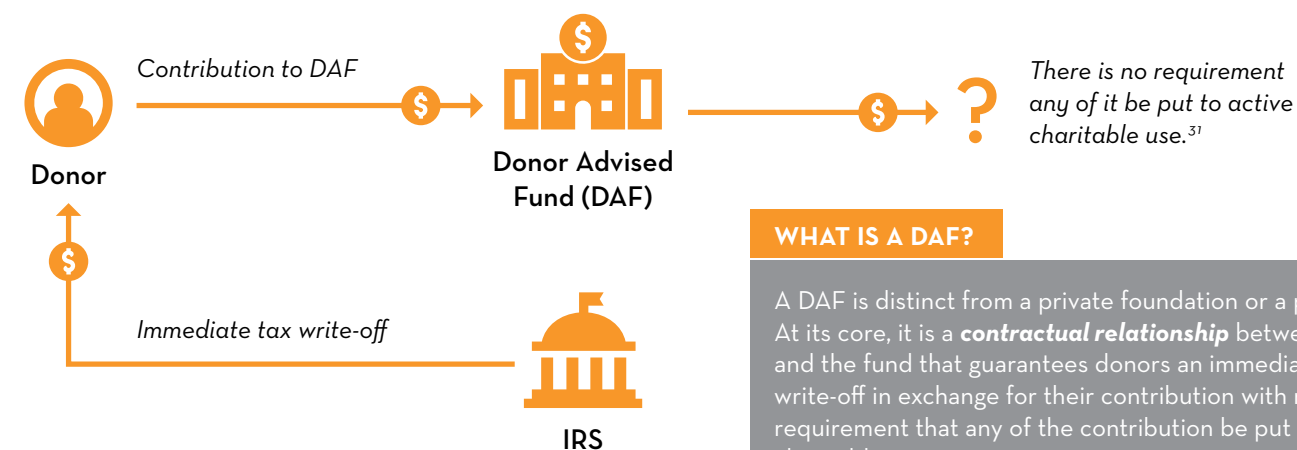

CCF has given money to:

CONCERNED WOMEN FOR AMERICA

Promotes the view that Islam is a not a religion, but a militant political movement, and the idea that mosques should be viewed as centers for militant political activity, rather than houses of worship.

What is a Donor-Advised Fund?

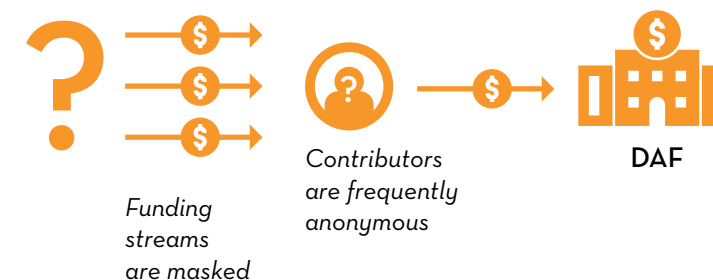

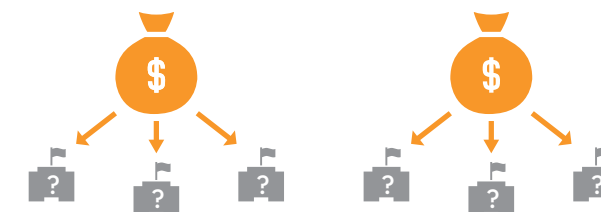

WHAT IS A DAF?

A DAF is distinct from a private foundation or a public charity. At its core, it is a contractual relationship between the donor and the fund that guarantees donors an immediate tax write-off in exchange for their contribution with no requirement that any of the contribution be put to active charitable use.

WHO HAS THE ULTIMATE AUTHORITY?

The largest DAFs in the country are administered through the charitable arms of major investment firms such as Fidelity and Schwab. Although a donor can suggest where they would like the money to be directed, the fund has ultimate authority on how to dole out the assets as each DAF has distinct criteria regarding which organizations it chooses to fund.

WHERE DOES THE MONEY COME FROM?

With a DAF, the contributor is frequently anonymous and thus impervious to scrutiny of their support of unsavory causes. In this way, a donor is able to mask their funding streams, making it nearly impossible to track charitable funding to its ultimate source. This lack of transparency poses a paradox: while DAFs ensure the secrecy of donor sources, they impact public life by supporting charities that serve broad human and social services.

THE DARK MONEY ATM

Every year, millions of dollars are channeled through this “dark money ATM” brushed clean of fingerprints, and straight into the coffers of anti-Muslim groups. Also alarming is that donors contribute to Donor Advised Funds without knowing what other types of organizations the DAF is funding. Good-faith donors, then, may not know that their DAF also funnels money to hate groups.

The Funding Channels of Hate:
Where the Money Flows

1 Americans traditionally donate to these 1,096 foundations & charities to promote the public good.

2 Family foundations, religious charities, and commercial brokers anonymize the donor and distribute money without public oversight.

A $1.5 Billion Marketplace

The detrimental impact of Islamophobia on American political discourse and culture has become a subject of increasing interest in mainstream media and intellectual and research circles. Established anti-Muslim groups, such as the David Horowitz Freedom Center and the Center for Security Policy, promote anti-Muslim bigotry in the public sphere under the guise of protecting national security, defending Israel, or preserving “American culture.”

Along with other multi-million-dollar organizations, these groups are flanked by a host of online magazines, radio shows, digital media, “independent” experts, and small think tanks. While some groups are dedicated primarily to anti-Muslim activity, others couple their Islamophobic agenda with far-right political agendas.

Between 2014 and 2016, these 39 anti-Muslim organizations enjoyed access to at least $1.5 billion through their collective organizational financial capacity. This funding is derived from multiple sources such as private donations, membership fees, and investment vehicles. This section provides data about the overall financial capacity of the Islamophobia Network by analyzing its total revenue capacity through a list of each organization’s revenue between 2014 and 2016. We also provide examples of the way in which these groups use this funding for public and policy impact, as well as personal profit.

Together, this array of organizations has come to be known as the Islamophobia Network, a powerful, decentralized, and informal coalition of actors that successfully influences local elections, state legislation, and federal policy.

This $1.5 billion has flown into politics, media, law enforcement, educational institutions, lobbying groups, and other industries to advance anti-Muslim and anti-Islam animus in America.

The following four anti-Muslim hate group profiles demonstrate the promulgation of Islamophobia through the various avenues mentioned above. Each profile illustrates the flow of money from the eighteen largest funders of hate to the anti-Muslim group, and from the group to its specific Islamophobic programs, policies, or actions.

The 18 largest financial supporters of anti-Muslim hate have given:

Teaching about the five pillars of Islamic faith — belief in one god, daily prayer, giving to charity, fasting, and pilgrimage to Makkah — was said to be “indoctrination.”⁸⁰

Gatestone used this money to Gatestone Institute is a misinformation creation and dissemination group that functions as a clearinghouse for far-right rhetoric on Islam, Muslims, and national security. It funnels its money to promote lies and misinformation and publish original commentary that positions Islam and Muslims as threats to Western society.

In 2018, it featured stories that claimed that the “mostly Muslim male migrants” from Africa, Asia and the Middle East” in Germany were fueling a “migrant rape crisis” and that “Muslim mass-rape gangs” were transforming the United Kingdom into “an Islamist Colony.”^{74, 75}

In 2017, it warned of a looming “jihadist takeover” of Europe leading to a “Great White Death.”^{76, 77}

In 2016, Gatestone collaborated with The Rebel, a Toronto-based online media outlet, to produce 12 fearmongering videos that featured prominent anti-Muslim activists, such as Daniel Pipes who is the founder of the anti-Muslim hate group, Middle East Forum. Topics for the videos included “the dangers of the Islamization of the West” and “Will Europeans succumb to Islamization, or will they rise to fight radical Islam and hold onto Western values?”⁷⁸ Such inflammatory and false stories are distributed widely by Gatestone through the group’s social media platforms and its media allies, including Breitbart News. Many of these fake pieces have also filtered into mainstream U.S. politics.

One of Gatestone’s most widely promoted lies has been about “no-go zones” in Europe. Gatestone claimed these were spaces where Muslim immigrants had constructed a parallel society in which local police could no longer enforce the state’s law. This lie percolated into the 2016 Republican primary — Texas Sen. Ted Cruz cited it in an op-ed, then-Gov. Bobby Jindal cited it in a London speech, and Donald Trump repeated it in his statements.⁷⁹ The lie served to drum up fear, distrust, and hate of Islam and Muslims during the entirety of the 2016 presidential election cycle.

1 In 2015, it organized four National Security Action Summits in Nevada, South Carolina, New Hampshire and Iowa — all critical primary states — to prepare and execute xenophobic and Islamophobic talking points for the upcoming presidential election.⁸² A number of anti-Muslim GOP candidates attended, including Donald Trump, Ted Cruz, Rick Santorum, and Ben Carson, who is now Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

3 In addition to advancing anti-Muslim positions and policies in conjunction with Republican candidates and officials, CSP also engaged in anti-Muslim law enforcement training. CSP worked with disgraced former FBI agent John Guandolo to hold a 7-hour briefing for Arizona law enforcement at the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office Training Facility in Phoenix in July of 2015.⁸⁵ John Guandolo is founder of Understanding the Threat, a training group known for providing anti-Islam instruction for U.S. law enforcement officials, and has made statements such as America "is at war with Islam."

2 Further strengthening its ties to presidential candidates, in September of 2015, CSP co-sponsored an anti-Iran rally in Washington, D.C. where it invited Cruz and Trump to speak.⁸³ CSP also invited ACT for America president, Brigitte Gabriel, who took the stage to amplify the demonization of Muslims. Shortly thereafter, candidate Trump cited a junk CSP poll as justification to call for a Muslim Ban, a "total and complete shutdown" of Muslims entering the United States on December 7.⁸⁴ CPS had commissioned The Polling Company, led by Kellyanne Conway who now serves as Counselor to Trump, to conduct the poll in June of that year.

$1,500,000Middle East Forum (MEF)

Middle East Forum is an extremist policy organization founded by Daniel Pipes that advances numerous anti-Muslim and anti-Islam initiatives. One of the most pernicious is the Forum's active lobbying for legislation that would eviscerate American Muslim civil society and leadership.

MEF used this money to

1 MEF sought to advance three bills:

- The Muslim Brotherhood Terrorist Designation Act (S.68 and H.R.377).
- The Naming the Enemy Within Homeland Security Act (H.R.5823).
- The Religious FIRE Act (H.R.5824).⁸⁶

This is a witch hunt that carries the potential to criminalize any Muslim engaged in, or even marginally associated with, the exercise of Muslim civil and political rights. This could extend to community centers, relief providers, mosques, and any number of Muslim civil activities. It plays perfectly into the hands of far-right Neo-Nazi populists who seek to "make all Muslims terrorists - not through insinuation but actually label them as such."⁸⁷

2 MEF has used its millions of dollars to attack American Muslim institutions like Islamic Relief, the Islamic Circle of North American, the Islamic Society of North America, Muslim Alliance of North America, Muslim American Society, Muslim Public Affairs Council, the Muslim Students Association, Muslim Youth of North America, and Young Muslims. It has spread malicious lies about American Muslim civic engagement to lawmakers, media, and community and corporate foundations.⁸⁸

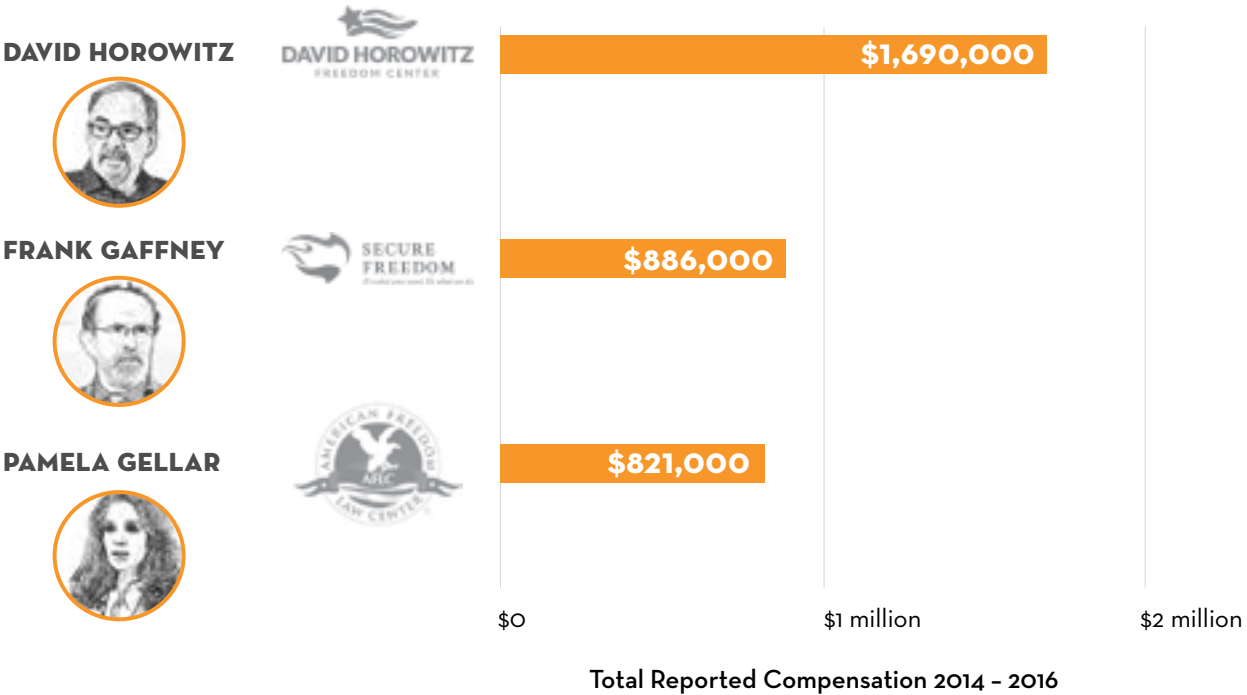

3 Other policies on which the MEF has lobbied Congress include applying extreme vetting measures to "everyday Muslims." It has pushed for mandatory anti-Muslim law enforcement training that paints American Muslim civil institutions as existential threats. Additionally, it has crafted a detailed proposal for the White House to launch a "Commission on Radical Islam."⁸⁹

Profiting from Hate

Several anti-Muslim bigots are building personal fortunes advancing prejudice. They have raked in hundreds of thousands of dollars through their positions of leadership in anti-Muslim groups.

The visualization on reported compensation highlights the highest grossing hatemongers. One notable anti-Muslim bigot missing in this list is Brigitte Gabriel, president of ACT for America. In 2010, Gabriel raised her own compensation 79 percent from $87,300 to $156,473. After CAIR drew public attention to this information, ACT listed Gabriel's reportable income as $0 from 2013 through 2015. In 2016 Gabriel's reported income on ACT's tax returns is stated to be $15,081.

IMPACT ON POLITICS & LAW

Anti-Muslim bigotry and Islamophobia have been a consistent feature of electoral politics for nearly a decade. In fact, continued research demonstrates that rates of anti-Muslim sentiment rise during election cycles, and not around international or domestic incidents of terrorism as many may presume.⁹⁰

Although Islamophobia has typically waxed and waned with the political cycle, the election of Donald Trump has opened a space for the Islamophobia Network to enter the formal halls of power.

The following pages document the connection between the Trump administration and the Islamophobia network and provide an overview of the Islamophobia Network's state-level legislative movement.

Trump Inc. The Anti-Muslim Hydra

The Islamophobia Network is deeply integrated into the current administration and exerts enormous impact over Trump, his rhetoric, and the policies he pursues. There have been more than a dozen individuals in the Trump administration who have possessed direct links to anti-Muslim hate groups. This section seeks to flesh out and illustrate these deep-rooted connections between organized anti-Muslim bigotry and the Trump administration.

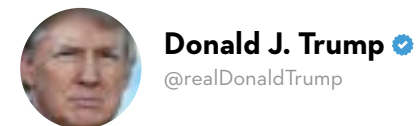

It is undeniable that anti-Muslim bigotry, prejudice, and discrimination has intensified and gained greater institutional legitimacy under Trump. Although numerous anti-Muslim policies, such as Countering Violent Extremism and the Terrorist Screening Database, were firmly in place well before his presidency, the undisguised Islamophobia pumped out by this government has cracked the superficial mask of neutrality previously in place.

DONALD TRUMP - THE 45TH PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Trump's rhetoric and policies directly support the anti-Muslim agenda and are integrated with the aims of the Islamophobia Network. In his very first speech to a joint session of Congress, Trump used the phrase "radical Islamic terrorism" straight from the Islamophobia Network's playbook.⁹¹ He has since used the same phrase, or a variation, innumerable times, exploiting a false and dangerous narrative about Islam and Muslims.⁹²

In August of 2017 he tweeted,

Radical Islamic Terrorism must be stopped by whatever means necessary! The courts must give us back our protective rights. Have to be tough!

4:06 PM – 18 Aug 2017

The same month he referred to a story about General Pershing shooting Muslims with pig's blood. "Study what General Pershing of the United States did to terrorists when caught. There was no more Radical Islamic Terror for 35 years!"⁹³ In October he falsely claimed that the "spread of Radical Islamic terror" was responsible for an increase in UK's crime rate.⁹⁴ In November he retweeted a British anti-Muslim hate group three times.⁹⁵

In addition to statement and tweets, Trump has also advanced anti-Muslim policies that advance the aims of the Islamophobia Network. The most well-known of these is the unconstitutional Muslim Ban. In his original demand for a Muslim Ban, in which he called for a "complete shutdown of Muslims entering the United States," he cited a defective and inaccurate poll published by the anti-Muslim hate group Center for Security Policy, founded by notorious Islamophobe Frank Gaffney. Gaffney is a conspiracy theorist who, among other ludicrous claims, has accused former President Barack Obama of being a secret Muslim. The poll itself was conducted by the polling company of Kellyanne Conway who now serves as counselor to the president.

It is distressing that when the Supreme Court ruled on the Muslim Ban on June 26, 2018, five of the nine justices ruled that the glaring anti-Muslim prejudice underlying and threading through the Ban did not matter. This is despite the fact that less than a month earlier, the Court ruled in favor of a Christian baker who refused to make a cake for a gay couple's wedding, arguing that the state commission's ruling against the baker was rooted in apparent anti-religious hostility.⁹⁶

Trump's anti-Muslim policies are not limited to the Muslim Ban. The administration has sought to rename the Countering Violent Extremism program to Countering Islamic Extremism, while simultaneously neglecting to address the rise in white nationalist terrorism, as acknowledged by the FBI and the Department of Homeland Security. This underscores several points.

1. While previously couched in neutral terms, the program has in practice focused almost exclusively on American Muslim communities.⁹⁷

2. The program is merely removing this faux neutrality to explicitly focus on and target American Muslims. This is despite empirical data that proves violence from anti-government extremists is the greatest threat to the country.⁹⁸

The National Security Strategy released in December 2017 further evidences the reach and codification of the Islamophobia Network's policies and language within the administration.⁹⁹ For example, it states, "Jihadist terrorists such as ISIS and al-Qa'ida continue to spread a barbaric ideology that calls for the violent destruction of governments and innocents they consider to be apostates. These jihadist terrorists attempt to force those under their influence to submit to Sharia law." The Strategy adopts the usage of "Sharia" in the manner that it is used by anti-Muslim hate groups - as antithetical to democracy and indicative of oppression and violence.¹⁰⁰ However, Sharia is best understood as an ethical framework.

Not only is he advancing anti-Muslim rhetoric and policies pushed by the Islamophobia Network, Trump has also appointed anti-Muslim bigots with direct ties to the Islamophobia Network into positions of power and influence in the government. Additionally, he has personally dined with Brigitte Gabriel, founder and president of hate group ACT for America.¹⁰¹ Gabriel also claims that "we have a standing meeting at the White House once a week."¹⁰²

ANTI-MUSLIM ACTIONS & STATEMENTS BY THE HYDRA ADMINISTRATION:

KELLYANNE CONWAY

Conway has worked closely with CSP. The polling firm of which she was formerly president and CEO, The Polling Company, conducted surveys for them on numerous occasions.¹⁰⁴ Conway conducted a junk poll, commissioned by CSP, to falsely impugn American Muslims in 2015. Trump cited this flawed poll as justification when he first announced his plan to implement a Muslim Ban.

Center for Security Policy (CSP)

FRED FLEITZ

Co-authored a CSP report that argued that the government should "use shariah-adherent advocacy and practices as legal premises for deportation and stripping of American citizenship."

Stated that "the majority of Muslims and Islamic authorities... promote or at least support jihad and shariah supremacism."¹⁰⁵

Promoted the anti-Muslim myth of European "no-go zones" — places the CSP falsely maligns as being governed by Islamic law.¹⁰⁶

Claimed that major American Muslim organizations and mosques are secretly working to advance a jihadist agenda, and that they should be "neutralized as political forces."¹⁰⁷

Said there was a "problem" with "Muslim communities." He continued, they are "susceptible to this radical worldview that wants to destroy modern society, create a global caliphate and impose sharia law on everyone on Earth."¹⁰⁸

STEPHEN MILLER

Co-drafted the first version of the Muslim Ban with Steve Bannon.

Wrote, “Wherever Muslims are found, which is in almost every country on the planet, there are adherents of the ideology of jihad.”¹⁰⁹

Launched and led the “Terrorism Awareness Project” at Duke University, a project of the David Horowitz Freedom Center. The Project claimed it sought to end “the efforts of the radical left and its Islamist allies to destroy American values and disarm this country as it attempts to defend itself in a time of terror.”¹¹⁰ The project ran ads in several campus newspapers across the country, titled “What Americans Need to Know About Jihad.” The ads stated, “Jihad is a war against Christians.”

Wrote a column titled, “A Time to Kill,” in which he wrote,

“We have all heard about how peaceful and benign the Islamic religion is, but no matter how many times you say that, it cannot change the fact that millions of radical Muslims would celebrate your death for the simple reason that you are Christian, Jewish or American.”¹¹¹

Stated, “[Islamic terrorists] have declared a death sentence on every man, woman and child living in this country [U.S.]”¹¹²

MIKE POMPEO

Issued a statement implying the Islamic Society of Wichita supported terrorism in 2016.

Appeared on Secure Freedom Radio, where he spoke of a “radical Islamic terrorist regime” and the spread of “Islamic materials” which were motivating individuals to engage in terrorist activities.¹¹³ *He spoke about a “terrorist infrastructure” linking American mosques and other Islamic organizations.*¹¹⁴

Told a church crowd in 2014 that the “threat to America” was caused by “people who deeply believe that Islam is the way.”¹¹⁵ He depicted the “War on Terror” as an “Islamic battle against Christianity.”¹¹⁶

Took to the House floor, after the Boston Bombing, to accuse American Muslims of being complicit in violence. He falsely claimed that Muslim leaders had not condemned the attacks.¹¹⁷ He criticized the alleged “silence in the face of extremism coming from the best-funded Islamic advocacy organizations and many mosques across America.” This purported silence, according to Pompeo, “casts doubt upon the commitment to peace among adherents of the Muslim faith” and “has made these Islamic leaders across America potentially complicit in these acts.”¹¹⁸

JOHN BOLTON

Served as chairman of the Gatestone Institute, a New York-based advocacy group that warns of a looming “jihadist takeover” of Europe leading to a “Great White Death.”^{119, 120}

HEATHER NAUERT

Mocked Muslims in a 2016 tweet that linked to a New York Times story about Muslims' concerns over then-presidential candidate Trump. "They should meet ISIS," she wrote.¹²¹

Claimed, in 2013, that "sharia law is now changing everything" after a Minnesota YMCA announced it would host a private swim class for Muslim girls to accommodate their religious clothing requirement.¹²² The chyron on the segment used an image of two young Somali-American girls with headscarves, with the headline "SHARIA LAW."

WALID PHARES

Claims that *"jihadists within the West pose as civil rights advocates."*¹²³

Served as a pseudo-expert in "The Third Jihad," a film produced by the Clarion Project in 2008.¹²⁴

JEFF SESSIONS

Said *"once again we face a totalitarian threat to the free world. This time it's from ideological and apocalyptic Islam."*¹²⁵

"Theologically-based sharia law ... fundamentally conflicts with our magnificent constitutional order that separates church and state, and that considers free debate and dissent the way to a better world."¹²⁶

SEBASTIAN GORKA

Claims that terror is rooted in Islam and the "martial" parts of the Quran. *"Anybody who downplays the role of religious ideology...they are deleting reality to fit their own world."*¹²⁷

Wrote, in his book, Defeating Jihad: The Winnable War, argues the need to recognize that the U.S.' enemy "is not "terror" or "violent extremism," but *"is the global jihadi movement, a modern totalitarian ideology rooted in the doctrines and martial history of Islam."*¹²⁸

Believes religious and racial profiling "is a synonym for common sense."¹²⁹

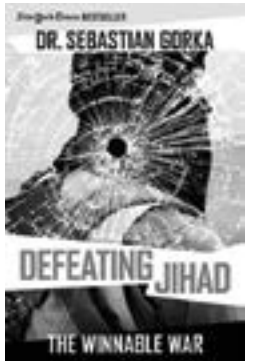

Speaking to a crowd in Florida after Trump's election, Gorka displayed a photograph of a dead brown-skinned man on the ground next to an assault rifle. When the audience began to cheer, he yelled:

"We can win now, we can win!"¹³⁰

In an interview on Fox News, Gorka said America was a "Judeo-Christian nation" and *accepting Muslim refugees would be "national suicide."*¹³¹

Executive chairman

STEVE BANNON

Co-drafted the first version of the Muslim Ban with Stephen Miller.¹³²

Said, “Islam is not a religion of peace – Islam is a religion of submission.”¹³³

Referred to Islam as “the most radical” religion.¹³⁴

Stated that “Islam is something much darker than Hitler & the Nazis.”¹³⁵

Described Islam as “a political ideology” and sharia “like Nazism, fascism, and communism.”¹³⁶

Stated, “We are in an outright war against jihadist Islamic fascism.” Citing a nonexistent perennial battle between Christianity and Islam, he added “I believe you should take a very, very, very aggressive stance against radical Islam.”¹³⁷

Accused mainstream media of “basically going along the lines of being Sharia-compliant on blasphemy laws,” and falsely said “Sharia courts [are] taking over Texas.”¹³⁸

Drafted an outline of a documentary-style three-part movie tracing “the culture of intolerance” and the threat posed by “radical Muslims” and their “enablers among us” in America. He titled it “Destroying the Great Satan: The Rise of Islamic Fascism in America.”¹³⁹

Posted headlines in Breitbart include “Political Correctness Protests Muslim Rape Culture,” “Birth Control Makes Women Unattractive and Crazy,” and “Data: Young Muslims in the West Are a Ticking Time Bomb, Increasingly Sympathizing with Radicals, Terror.”¹⁴⁰

MICHAEL FLYNN

“I don’t see Islam as a religion. I see it as a political ideology that... will mask itself as a religion globally, and especially in the West, especially in the United States, because it can hide behind and protect itself by what we call freedom of religion.”¹⁴¹

Said, at an ACT event in Dallas, “Islam is a political ideology. It definitely hides behind this notion of it being a religion. And I have a very, very tough time because I don’t see a lot of people screaming ‘Jesus Christ’ with hatchets or machetes or rifles shooting up clubs or hatcheting, literally axing families on a train, or like they just killed a couple of police officers with a machete. It’s unbelievable. So we have a problem.”¹⁴²

Said that Islam is “like cancer. You know, I’ve gone through cancer in my own life.” So it’s like cancer. And it’s a like a malignant cancer, though, in this case. It has metastasized.”¹⁴³

Said, in a speech to the Ahavath Torah Congregation in Stoughton, MA, “We are facing another ‘ism,’ just like we faced Nazism, and fascism, and imperialism and communism. This is Islamism, it is a vicious cancer inside the body of 1.7 billion people on this planet and it has to be excised.”¹⁴⁴

Said, “Radical Islam is metastasizing throughout the world. What keeps me up at night is the sobering realization that evil exists. The radicalization of Islam and its barbaric cause that uses modernity to influence potentially millions around the world to join their cause should keep us all up at night.”¹⁴⁵

Said in an Al-Jazeera interview in 2016, he’s “been at war with Islam, or a component of Islam, for the last decade.”¹⁴⁶

Wrote, in a New York Post op-ed, “the Islamic world is an epic failure.”

Wrote, in his book The Field of Fight, “Sharia is a violent law that is buried in barbaric convictions.”¹⁴⁷

“Fear of Muslims is rational.”¹⁴⁸

Legalizing Anti-Muslim Bigotry

“If it walks like a duck, swims like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it’s a duck.’ ... The intent of these [anti-foreign law] bills is to target a particular religion and group of people for disfavored treatment.”

– Montana Governor Steve Bullock

This section provides an overview of the Islamophobia Network’s legislation movement, which has been mostly centered around promoting anti-Shariah laws in state houses of legislation. It also includes a more recent attempt to promote a statue known as Andy’s Law, which, like the anti-Shariah movement, is intended to publicly and politically malign American Muslim institutions.

The History of Anti-Muslim Bills Around the Country

COUNCIL ON AMERICAN-ISLAMIC RELATIONS • 2019 ISLAMOPHOBIA REPORT

ANTI-MUSLIM "FOREIGN LAW" LEGISLATION

In an interview with the New York Times, David Yerushalmi, anti-Muslim bigot and architect of the model anti-Muslim legislation, American Laws for American Courts, openly admitted the perverse intent behind the anti-Muslim legislation movement. "If this thing passed in every state without any friction, it would have not served its purpose," he said. "The purpose was heuristic – to get people asking this question, 'What is Shariah?'"¹⁴⁹

In other words, the purpose of "foreign law" legislation is to function as a tool to foster fear of the unknown and vilify and create animosity toward an entire religious community. In addition to this, anti-Muslim legislation steals American Muslims' constitutional rights and stigmatizes community members who chose to use private faith-based arbitrators for family disputes. This practice is comparable to that of American Jews and Catholics who opt to settle certain legal disputes with arbitrators who rely on Jewish law, also referred to as Halakha, or Catholic Canon.

Three hate groups lead the anti-Muslim legislation movement.

1. One, is the American Public Policy Alliance (APPA), an advocacy organization that first sponsored Yerushalmi's discriminatory "American Laws for American Courts" model legislation. APPA's fundamental mission is to advance legislation that demonizes Muslims.¹⁵⁰

2. ACT for America

3. Center for Security Policy (CSP)

In the last two years alone, ACT chapter leader Caroline Solomon from Montana testified during the 2017 Senate hearing in support of anti-Muslim "foreign law" Senate Bill 97. In Iowa, Rep. Eric Redman worked with CSP's Chris W. Holton to introduce a series of anti-Muslim "foreign law" bills every year from 2016 to 2018.¹⁵¹

Both anti-Muslim "foreign law" bills adopted into law in 2017 — one in Alabama and one in Texas — were also actively assisted in the process by individuals from CSP and ACT. CSP's Col. Paul Deckert (Ret.) helped Alabama state Rep. Brandt Smith (R-District 5) present and introduce HB 1041, which included in its title "To Declare American Laws For American Courts."¹⁵²

Texas state Rep. Dan Flynn's (R-District 2) introduced anti-Muslim legislation in 2016 a second time, his first attempt having failed the year before. The language of the two acts matched 100 percent.¹⁵³ After it became law, Flynn lauded ACT for their support, stating in a 2018 interview, "[the bill] was my number one priority because it had been offered before and gone down in flames...then the national association of ACT came back and they got 750,000 members and they selected our bill as their number one bill for promoting...and they were kind to me."

REPUBLICAN ENDORSEMENT OF ANTI-SHARIA FEARMONGERING

In November 2017, the Republican National Committee posted an online survey, “Listening to America,” that contained the following problematic questions:

1. Are you concerned by the potential spread of Sharia Law?
2. Do you want to see more done to stop radical Islamic terrorists from coming to our shores?

The exact survey questions also appeared in a Donald J. Trump campaign email.¹⁵⁴

In the same way that it is unacceptable, wrong, and indecent for the RNC to ask Americans if they are concerned about the potential spread of Catholic canon law or Jewish Halacha, it is unacceptable to malign the religious practices of any American, including American Muslims.

In 2012, the Republican National Convention adopted an amendment to their party platform, introduced by Kansas Secretary of State Kris Kobach (R), that supports anti-Muslim “foreign law” legislation. A similar provision remains in the 2016 party platform.¹⁵⁵

THE ANTI-MUSLIM NETWORK’S SUPPORT OF OTHER LEGISLATION

Independent organizations have identified other bills as part of the anti-Muslim legislation movement. These have also been promoted by groups in the Islamophobia Network. One such legislation is Andy’s Law, which creates a civil cause for action in incidents of terrorism and allows private individuals to sue those who may be directly or indirectly involved in the act, whether they intended to or not.¹⁵⁶ The mechanism that allows for this type of civil liability come by way of the material support statute, which is already a problematic threshold given its increasing definitional and prosecutorial ambiguity in the criminal code itself.¹⁵⁷ In effect, this can drag American Muslim individuals, institutions, and businesses into potential lawsuits, and exert a chilling effect on American Muslim civic, political, and commercial life.

Andy’s Law, deemed by experts as redundant and unnecessary, has already become law in seven states. The law’s redundancy is in fact rooted in its anti-Muslim agenda: already under the federal Antiterrorism Act of 1992, individuals can bring civil suits “against third-parties for injuries purportedly resulting from violence committed by terrorist groups.”¹⁵⁸

These laws serve no purpose except to reinforce the notion that Islam and Muslims in general are connected to acts of international terror.

Like “foreign law” legislation, the original template of Andy’s Law itself has been drafted by the anti-Muslim hate group American Public Policy Alliance.¹⁵⁹ The legislation is also promoted by ACT, which actively displays Andy’s Law on its state legislative webpage as a bill it is advocating. Additionally, CSP Threat Information Office Director Kyle Shideler authored an article promoting Andy’s Law in December 2014.¹⁶⁰

The End of Islamophobia?

Islamophobia is deeply rooted in a long legacy of structural racism in the United States and Europe and, as this report has shown, is firmly entrenched in American cultural and political institutions. Therefore, it shouldn't be expected that anti-Muslim bigotry will end anytime soon. However, it is also the case that the increasing boldness and hubris of the Islamophobic actors in mainstream spaces has led to greater visibility and condemnation of their actions. Xenophobic political thinkers attempted to implement a Muslim registration system and enforce a complete immigration ban on Muslims; the public responded in protests and the courts ruled in the favor of justice. Candidates that ran on Islamophobic campaigns did poorer than their counterparts who didn't. A record number of Muslims ran for and were elected to public office between 2016 and 2018 and two Muslim women entered the halls of Congress in 2019. Despite signals that point to a more positive long-term future for social and cultural attitudes about Islam and Muslims in the public sphere, a tremendous amount of work needs to be done in order to curb the damage done by the Islamophobia network.

This report has provided a clear picture for stakeholders interested in helping inform their colleagues and the wider public about the complex web that makes up funding, support, and patronage of the Islamophobia Network. While various studies have pointed to aspects of Islamophobia funding, this report makes the connection between mainstream American philanthropy and the once-fringe Islamophobia Network. It does so in a way to make it easy to identify connections and empower decision makers to make informed choices about who they partner with in programming and from which financial pools they draw upon for support. While it shouldn't be expected that the multi-million-dollar Islamophobia industry will disappear overnight, readers can anticipate that major foundations, the wider public, and the philanthropic community will not sit quietly while anti-Muslim institutions abuse American values and traditions to promote their agendas. It is our hope that with sustained action, institutional collaboration, and dedicated will, a community of progressive and mainstream allies will emerge to push the Islamophobia Network back to the fringe of our society, where odious and incendiary speech belong.

We are confident that with everyone's help, future reports will perhaps begin to chart the decline in the Islamophobia Network's funding power, rather than its growth as has been the case until now.

18 This definition was developed by drawing on two existing definitions: One by UC Berkeley's Islamophobia Research and Documentation Project and the second by Professor Khaled Beydoun in his paper, "Islamophobia: Toward a Legal Definition and Framework." UC Berkley's definition reads: "Islamophobia is a contrived fear or prejudice fomented by the existing Eurocentric and Orientalist global power structure. It is directed at a perceived or real Muslim threat through the maintenance and extension of existing disparities in economic, political, social and cultural relations, while rationalizing the necessity to deploy violence as a tool to achieve "civilizational rehab" of the target communities (Muslim or otherwise). Islamophobia reintroduces and reaffirms a global racial structure through which resource distribution disparities are maintained and extended." "Islamophobia Research & Documentation Project."
