

Amara Chaudhry-Kravitz

Legal Director, Council on American-Islamic Relations & Adjunct Professor, Villanova University

“Is Brown the New Black: Are American Muslims Racially Profiled?”

Tuesday, February 25, 2014
SAC 300
12:30-2:00 PM

Amara Chaudhry-Kravitz joined the Center for Arab & Islamic Studies in January 2014 as an adjunct faculty member. She is also an attorney with the Council on American-Islamic Relations Philadelphia (CAIR-Philadelphia), a local office of a national Muslim civil rights organization. She served as legal director for more than two years before stepping down into a part-time “of counsel” role in mid-January 2014. At CAIR-Philadelphia, her work focuses on governmental practices and policies (many of which were enacted post-9/11) which have either the intent or effect of negatively affecting American Muslims.

Free and Open to the Public